The art of observation

1. Choose an image or object
from the museum to observe
for this activity.

2. Spend five minutes writing or drawing any details you notice
about the object.

Get your observation skills ready:

Draw what you notice about the image or object. Pay attention to what you can see, hear, or smell. Imagine what you could taste or feel if you could touch the object or image.

3. List three words that describe the object or image:

The art of investigation

4. Describe what you observe about the object or image (colors, shapes, designs, people, places, or anything else)

5. Analyze what you observed. What seems important about the object or image?

6. It's time to interpret: why do you think the object or image you choose to investigate is important?
